

Get the Important SSI/SSDI Disability Benefits You Deserve

You may qualify for SSI or SSDI even if you get other disability benefits. Both give disabled persons help through monthly payments.

The Social Security Administration offers two types of benefits:

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) is for adults with little or no work history and children. To qualify for SSI, you must meet income and asset limits set by the Social Security Administration.

If you get SSI, you may also qualify for:

- Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)
- Housing Assistance

Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) is for people who have a work history but can no longer work.

If you have SSDI, you can get Medicare after two years. Once you have Medicare, you can also get Medicare Part D. This will help with your drug costs. If you have SSDI and a dependent under age 18, they may also get benefits.
